Our friends at Duline studied their incredible terroir at Ronco Pitotti for years and experimented for many vintages before they were finally ready to release their first Pinot Nero. The resulting wine is nothing short of brilliant and definitely a contender for Italy's best example. Its secret weapon is the soil of ponca (in the local dialect)—a flaky, layered limestone/sandstone rich in minerals—on which the grape is grown. Medium robe, aromatic complexity, elegance, length, silky tannin, and stunning flavor are all on display.
